This election season, the Huron County Democratic Party will launch a traveling headquarters to reach people in every corner of the county. Each Saturday, the traveling headquarters will park in a different community.

With the traveling headquarters, the party hopes to provide election services while addressing coronavirus contagion concerns. Unlike a traditional uptown headquarters, the traveling headquarters will provide for all in-person communications to be done outdoors. Also, masks will be required, social distance will be clearly marked, and hand sanitizer will be conveniently available.

But, just as a traditional uptown headquarters would, the traveling headquarters will provide voter registration service, absentee ballot applications, poll worker sign-up, campaign materials and literature, and opportunities to talk with Democratic candidates.

Among the candidates the party expects to visit the traveling headquarters are Melissa James (melissajamesforcommissioner.com), who is running for county commissioner, and Dara Adkison (dara4ohio.com), who is running for state representative of District 57. As they are booked, the party will list candidate visits on its web page (hurondems.org/traveling-hq).

The traveling headquarters will be open every Saturday between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. from August 15 through October 31. The first stop, on Saturday, August 15, will be in Bellevue, tentatively at Central Park. The next stop, on Saturday, August 22, will be at Norwalk's Suhr Park.
